MANHATTAN H.S. OF AVIATION TRADES

CLASS OF JUNE 1946
CHARLES ZIRN, ACTING PRINCIPAL

ELLIOT V. NOSKA

in memoriam, elliot v. noska

To give words to our sorrow at the loss of a dear friend and loyal comrade is difficult, for so many are the happy memories of years of deep devotion to a noble cause that the eager mind knows not where to pause for recollection.

Elliot V. Noska is no longer with us. Never again shall we be cheered by the infectious smile, the encouraging word, the deep-rooted desire to be of help to all who ask for help. He is gone, and we are left to our own devices. But he has bequeathed a multitude of good works that can never perish.

Early in life, this good man gave himself to the service of youth. He made their problems his problems, the molding of their characters his chief concern. He recognized that the years of adolescence are raw years, turbulent years, when youth needs careful guidance, fatherly encouragement. His was unceasing vigilance in youth's behalf. His reward was the gratitude of thousands of boys who, in school and in the paths to which they turned upon graduation, revered him as the wisest of counsellors, the friendliest of men.

This school of ours pulsates with the spirit of Elliot V. Noska. His vision and his planning made possible the growth of a small institution to what it means today in city and nation. Our departed principal never was one to rest upon laurels deservedly won. His question was ever, "What more can be done?" "How else can we help one another?" This dynamic quality of his meant growth, foreswore idle stagnation.

Let us not merely mourn our departed leader. Let us rather impress upon our hearts the memory of his great vitality, and vow to carry on as he would want us to.

GREETINGS TO THE CLASS OF JUNE 1946

You leave us at a time when our country is engaged in the tremendously important task of reconversion. Once again the wheels of industry turn in a world at peace. Though not all the problems of the world are solved, men of good will are striving to ensure the goals for which we fought so long.

In this world, there is a place for you. These three years of schooling have given you the fundamental knowledge and techniques that will aid you in securing employment worthy of your ability and talents. Do not be discouraged if success does not come immediately. The bottom of the ladder is always a good place to start. The skills you acquired at SAT plus wide experience in the industry plus determination to give your best to any job you do must pay dividends.

We who have watched you grow from raw, inexperienced youngsters to fine young men have confidence in your ability to take your rightful place in the aviation industry and in your community. As you go to join thousands of others who have enhanced the good name of S.A.T., take heart from their success and confirm our faith in your future.

administration

Mr. Noska's death has meant, for the gentlemen pictured above, the sad task of running a school without the counsel and guidance of a man who truly gave his life to the service of youth. They carry on, always remembering the high principles which actuated Mr. Noska's administration. Backed by a loyal staff and respected by every student, we know them capable of maintaining that esprit de corps that has always marked S. A. T. Pictured, seated, are Mr. Naidich, Mr. Zirn, and Mr. Woehr; standing, Mr. Kaplan, Mr. Nussbaum, and Mr. Langer.

Here are the ladies who do yeowoman service in our school offices. Pictured, seated, are Miss Eisenberg and Miss Liebowitz; standing, in the usual order, Miss Neuman, Miss Kearns, Miss Rosenberg, and Miss Kramer.

some of these days

Imagine! Just three short years ago we hopped on the rickety El for our first journey to S.A.T., where you are guilty until proved innocent, and innocent only until you first err on the bench hook or jig board. Now our throats tighten and our eyes grow glassy whenever we relive certain immortal moments:

The Central Park excursions during Spring . . . the inevitable third floor jams . . . twenty laps around the yard . . . our favorite teacher's ultra-long pencil . . . reading Macbeth in English . . . standing on line for milk . . . the salami sandwiches at Ben and Sam's . . . Mr. Herfurtner's deep, rich voice . . . rookies trying to find their rooms . . . counting off in shop . . . marching around the block during a fire drill . . . filing eighth-inch metal in fifth term . . . uncredited maintenance . . . checking mags in seventh . . . watching our pals get drafted.

The pretty girls at the school dances . . . snowball fights after school in winter . . . talk and plans for a new school . . . those glorious Christmas and Easter vacations . . . sipping cokes at the Manhattan . . . rookies searching for the swimming pool on the seventh floor . . . the Aeronca in Mr. Miller's shop . . . rowing in Central Park after school in spring . . . the crowded auditorium on a cold day . . . the colorful posters during campaigning days . . . that report card with a failing mark in Math . . . riveting like mad in Mr. Nejez' shop . . . pushing a broom on maintenance days . . . things like that . . . let's go back and relive some of it.

September '43 to January '44

Three thousand planes roar over Ruhr Valley in Germany . . . Seven hundred fifty ordained rookies jam S.A.T. . . . seven hundred forty-nine swimming pool passes sold . . . Colonel Adamson, forced down with Eddie Rickenbacker in the Pacific, visits our school; remarks upon

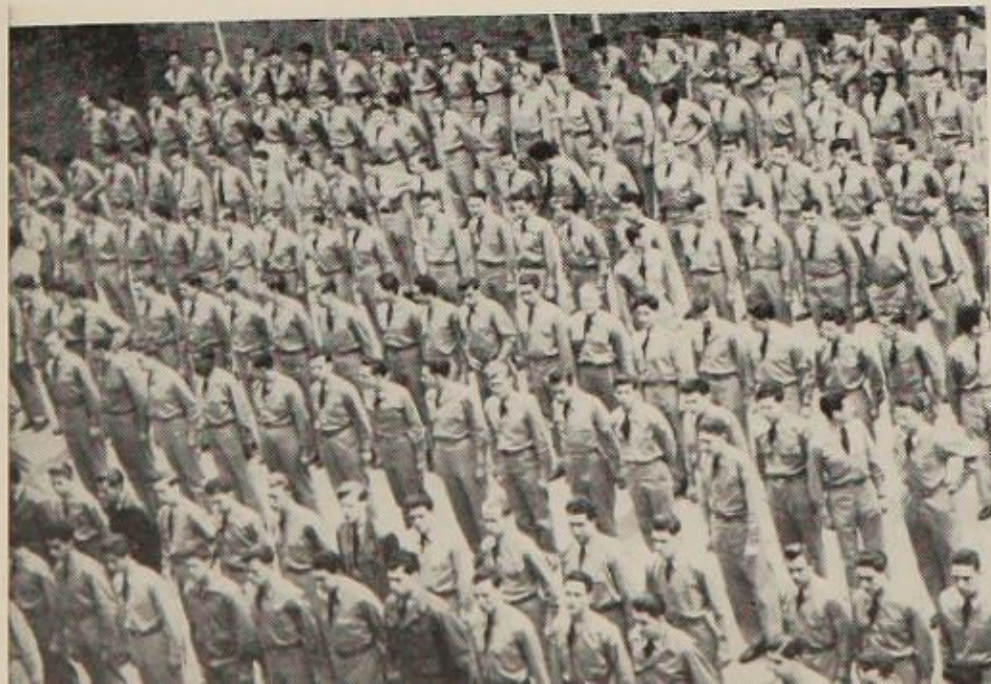

S.A.T.'s fine school spirit; we were hiding . . . Rookies build models for the Navy; one hundred naval aviation cadets flunk out on aircraft identification . . . Mr. Caballero teaches WASPS to fly in Cub repaired by S.A.T. students . . . Flash! Italy surrenders; one down, two to go . . . Seniors donate blood to Red Cross; seniors become anemic overnight . . . Mayor LaGuardia inspects flying ambulance donated by school to Navy . . . Eighth termers get P-40 and B-17 hydraulic landing gear to work on . . . Bugle and Drum Corps takes top honors in New Jersey competition . . . A.C.O. puts on big party; Ben and Sam, Mr. Zirn star . . . Senior Prom in the groove, says Log . . . S.A.T. plans new school.

February to June '44

S.A.T. Baseball team trounces Stuyvesant 9-6 . . . S.A.T. begins subject promotion . . . Wing fittings pose as major problem for fourth termers; many educated rookies found pouring molten metal into the jigs Mr. Ferrante uses for checking fittings; that's one way of getting them to fit . . . Spring comes, and mechanics become animal lovers, feeding the chimpanzee in the Central Park Zoo; said chimp urges swift return to afternoon classes . . . Tricky song, "Mairzy Doats" big hit with students; it makes their tongues look like pretzels . . . Mr. Augustine, after thirty years of service, retires to Florida for well-earned rest . . .

Flash! France invaded . . . Handball team cops city championship by smashing De Witt Clinton, 3 to 2 . . . Seventh term shops get new Allison engines donated by Army; intelligent senior remarks that he never knew June owned such a tremendous corporation . . . Log wins (as usual) first prize in the Columbia Scholastic Press Awards . . . Aviation students broadcast to nation on coast-to-coast network . . . S.A.T. plans new school.

September '44 to January '45

Life crawls on, and rookies crawl out of fourth term into the intriguing fifth, only to be belittled as Zombies . . . They are too busy accentuating the positive, however, to notice their new status . . . Mr. Fidell's new Log journalism class begins business . . . President Roosevelt is a major figure at the Teheran Conference; Joe Zambito is a major figure in the senior elections, running off with the presidency . . . War-time suspension of sports makes us realize that we're in the battleline, too; we grimly vow to make up for it if ever we get the chance . . . A new system, senior Big Brothers, is inaugurated; seniors now will familiarize rookies with our school and its courses; mass orientation night planned for next term . . . Mr. Naidich gets the nod, steps into Mr. Augustine's shoes . . . Log prints gala Christmas edition, enjoyed by all . . . Technical course goes into effect next term for fortunate rookies-to-be . . . Flash! Mr. Schwartz crashes in East River, makes headlines all over the nation;

declines Hollywood offers . . . Eighth termers get Aircobra in shop; it'll never come out alive . . . Senior patch added to uniform . . . S.A.T. plans new school.

February to June '45

We come to school this term and find, to our amazement, new seats—a la amphitheater—in the annex; we're moving ahead . . . Twelve five-cylinder Kinner engines arrive at the seventh term engine shops; just think of it; next term we'll work on 'em; oh well, how long did you expect them to last, anyway . . . Aviation's diamond masters get started on right leg, beating Commerce, 6 to 1 . . . Orientation night is a big success . . . The world mourns the death of our beloved president, Franklin Delano Roosevelt . . . Here at school, another loss, for Nellie, ever faithful and popular, has passed away . . . Baseball team still going strong . . . Flash! May 8, Germany surrenders unconditionally; two down, one to go . . . Seventh termers, Richard Hanson, a great success at auditorium programs . . . Log, as usual, wins first place award in their category for all-ways excellence . . . MacArthur and Nimitz batter Japs in the Pacific; sixth termers batter gas tanks and watertight bulkheads in brutal fashion . . . Why the open shirt for Mr. Chafetz? Buttons popped off when he stuck out his chest; his baseball team just copped the championship of three boroughs. S.A.T. plans new school.

September '45 to January '46

Wow! What a summer! What a vacation! August 9, the first atom bomb drops on Hiroshima . . . August 15, Japs surrender, VJ Day officially announced . . . The Dodgers have a disappointing season; well, "wait 'til next year" . . . And we're seventh termers. All those beautiful engines are ours. Ugh, it's no fun cleaning oily pistons . . . Ouch! the knuckles just can't take the beating safetying unleashes at them . . . Bugle and Drum Corps takes two first prizes in Jersey competition; Mr. Bloom blooms smiles of satisfaction . . . Mr. Schain organizes first S.A.T. orchestra in many moons . . . Glee Club entertains patients of nearby hospital; patients display patience . . . December 20, student jivesters make resounding success of first seventh term dance; lower seniors proudly exhibit cuts garnered in shop . . . "Plane Talking" first musical revue given by S.A.T. (with the assistance of capable girls. Ruff!) acclaimed by all as terrific . . . So we leave seventh term, where never before have so many students worked so hard on so many cylinders for so long a time for such low marks . . . S.A.T. plans new school.

February to June '46

Yippee! we're seniors; now we can don the coveted senior uniform with the identifying patch on the sleeve; it's our privilege to splice cables and operate pneumatic riveting guns . . . A new, titanic, tongue-twisting, witty ditty, "Chickory Chick," has students raving . . . Peron "elected" president of Argentina; Seniors elect (by vote that is) Terenzoni president of the Senior Council . . . The drive is on, Mr. Bennett is on the prowl; Solo money, graduation dues, ring, Prom tickets . . . We hoof it, snazzy-like, at the Needle Trades dance . . . Jitterbugging is the highlight of the spectacular Walton dance . . . The heppy, jumpin' jivemen stam-pede the Julia Richman affair . . . But at the Prom we waltz and we fox-trot, many of us with these same girls; and we love it . . . Oh, to be a rookie again . . . S.A.T. plans new school. Yes, to be a rookie again; sounds funny, doesn't it? At one time this thought was farthest from our minds; but now—well, it's different . . . We go through it all too rapidly . . . Prom night comes with charming girls in dazzling gowns, escorted by handsome young MEN . . . Graduation exercises are here, there, gone forever . . . Oh, to be a rookie again.

from the bottom of our hearts

From the bottom of our hearts
Thanks for the memory
Of books that weighed a ton
Of bells that made us run
A whale of a time for you and me
In our alma mater S. A. T.
We thank you so much.

And thanks for the memory
Of gas tanks that we built
Of casein glue we spilt
Of cylinder four and carburetor
Of swimming pool and escalator
We thank you so much.

And thanks for the memory
Of notes through which we'd dig
And simple stuff like trig
Of absence reports and a cutting card
And 25 laps around the yard
We thank you so much.

Gee, we'll miss them all
Our friends named Ben and Sam
Whose specialty is ham
The inner yard and the Hollywood
Pepsi-Cola that tasted so good
We thank you so much.

We made you dizzy, we made you gray
There's a tear in our eye, but all we can say
Is thank you so much.
And now we'll say goodbye
We'll miss you, don't ask why
You gave us the knowledge we will need
Because of you we will succeed
So—we thank you so much.

certificates of worthiness

Associated with each graduation in S.A.T. is the time-honored tradition of presenting certificates of worthiness to approximately five percent of the graduating class. These boys are our prize pupils. They have consistently attained better marks in both shop and academic subjects. They represent the cream in a bumper crop of potential aviation mechanics. The task of scanning three years of high school records to determine the boys who merit this honor has fallen for many years upon the very capable shoulders of Dean Weiner. It was no easy job, in view of the size of our class, and our deepest appreciation goes to our dean for his effort and concern. The senior class, the administration and the faculty are proud to have known these young men for the past three years, and to them go our best wishes for the utmost in future success and happiness.

Gaze upon us, lower termers, for we have been granted the sacred heritage of seniorship. These garments which we wear faithfully serve as a sufficient reward for the three years of arduous study which we have all managed to survive. Indeed, the tree of patience seems at last ready to bear fruit.

FEBRUARY: Brazen and bold as all new seniors are, we scorn outer clothing and catch innumerable colds exhibiting in nonchalant fashion our spiffy uniforms, wandering grimly through the wintry winds to the steps of our beloved mansion of learning. At last we enter the home of the great ones, the reconverted eighth term shop. Our new shop teachers gaze lovingly upon us, pat our cheeks and then gently turn us upside down in a search for loose shop funds. What a sight to gaze once more upon the A-17-S rivet.

MARCH: Discarding our Davis lamps, for we come now to school in the light of early dawn, we enter upon a hectic election campaign. Our choice wins, having promised graduation in May, no draft for S.A.T. grads, and only nineteen laps around the yard. Money is the eternal cry. Whether cringing in one of the basement boilers or in the scrap metal pile, Mr. Bennett finds us. His eight pairs of roller skates are continually being repaired by his slave squadron. Comes picture time, and all the matinee idols get sharpened up. Senior Spanos gets shave and haircut for the big occasion. Great talk about a school dance with the Julia Richman girls, but quick death to the idea because none of us knows how to dance.

APRIL: Spring is in the air, and a man's thoughts turn to—money, money, money. We are assailed by reps for Solo, Log, Jewelry, Red Cross, and sundry individual benefits. Andrew Sbrocco is seen arguing with Dean Weiner about wearing gym sneakers to the Prom. Wing distribution nears, and academic teachers marvel at the subdued atmosphere. Apple prices go up as seniors try to keep teacher happy. Solo men avoid the accusing finger of Mr. Agranoff as they try like mad to get the book out by August 15.

MAY: What gorgeous weather this merry month of May. We now come to school in our new Packards, Cadillacs, and Fords. Teachers, the old diehards, cling to their bicycles and pogo sticks. What bliss to drowse in the spacious cockpit of the Beechcraft in Mr. Miller's shop. No, Mulligan, I won't sign your petition. The elections are over—over, do you hear? Much dither about the glamor contest, won by unanimous acclaim of three student judges and Mr. Bennett, first honors going to Miss Flamholtz. The judges have been missing for two weeks. We wonder where the bodies have been buried. Richard Elmo's financial difficulties have been solved temporarily. He was seen during lunch hour, helping out Harry, the Hot Dog man. Nothing can keep a good senior down.

JUNE: Gosh, those finals were tough, but thank goodness we can now sell the old gyp sheet to some smart seventh termmer. Lanyi, bright boy of the class, finally proved through trig and navigation that morp is prom spelled backwards. We're not convinced yet. Thousands of beautiful girls at the Prom, and seniors decked out in tux and tails. No wonder so many teachers attend. Comes at last, after weeks of tapering off from our last-minute strenuous activities, the big day itself, parole—graduation, we meant to say. Mr. B., asked his opinion of the graduating class, transformed his features into what resembled a corroded grapefruit and snarled, "Bunch of stupid kids."

So, with this modest modicum of proper S.A.T. diction, we take our leave of the hallowed halls that have been our home for the last three years. We are now equipped with brains, facts, and fancy ideas of our own. All we need now is a clear wind, and we'll do the rest. Thanks for everything.

It seems like only four months ago our beloved portals were be-decked with innumerable posters, pictures and bright sayings, as once more a new senior class saw its contemporaries beat their respective brains out getting nominations, making impressive ads and being good to all fellow seniors till it hurt, in fond hopes of being elected to the Senior Council. Out of a field of twenty candidates came Amerigo Terenzoni as president; David Triebitz, vice-president; Robert Nielssen, secretary; and Charles Zirpiades, treasurer. Our thanks go to these boys for making various girls schools better places to dance in. To Dean Weiner also we give our collective regards. The eighth term would not have been as successful had it not been for his keen foresight and excellent advice.

The problems overcome by these officers and the other members of the Senior Council were by no means few or insignificant. Rings, pins and other jewelry were distributed with a minimum of confusion and a maximum of expense. Then came the Prom. Everybody knew the best way to run the Prom. Suggestions met these harassed officers wherever they went. Armchair organizers were put in their proper place when the season's gala event arrived and compliments from every source proved the discretion of the committee. The senior class is much obliged to Dean Weiner for his ready cooperation in all matters, and to the officers for devoting their time and energy to giving us the most pleasant memories to take into a muddled world with us.

our atomic future

The heptite plastic door flew open as Buzz Caruso, star reporter of the Interplanetary News, approached the main offices of the Hyper-space Travel, Inc.

"Buzz Caruso!" yelled Ace Miller, star pilot of the new Jupiter-Earth Cruiser. "Why, I haven't seen you since we graduated from S.A.T." Miller jumped off his chomium-plated desk, and the two shook hands amid back-pounding and laughter.

"I came over to write up an article on the progress of space travel," remarked Caruso.

"You're in the right place, chum. Let's start with the research lab. You'll see something there."

The two stepped into a chomium-plated elevator.

"Just like the one in S.A.T." laughed Miller. Caruso was just about to reply to this witticism, but the elevator dropped with such speed that the only audible answer was "Woosh."

The men stepped out into a brightly-lit, immense room, with rows and rows of benches covered in an orderly fashion with complicated, intricate tools, machines, gadgets of every description. One side of the room was devoted entirely to a gigantic tool room that had every tool imaginable, and all in perfect condition. Men in white coveralls were working industriously on the machines.

"Why, I can make out some faded S.A.T. emblems on these coveralls," exclaimed Caruso.

"Well, about ninety percent of our workers are graduates of S.A.T. We find they're the best in the business. Since we changed laundries, we find the coveralls last a bit longer."

"What's that large machine on the stand over there?" asked Caruso.

"Why, that's our new quadruple-firing etherium engine. We use that engine after we pass the earth's atmosphere. The idea was developed by Kristchunas one day when he stuck a lit match in a dope can to see how full it was. The whole design was worked out with the help of some S.A.T. engine shop teachers. You know, we have many former instructors here. Our policy is to give good men the salary they deserve."

"So I've heard," answered Caruso. "Let's go over and examine the engine more closely. What are those two mechanics—why, I know them. They're Nick Marmon and Veto Volintinetti."

"Right you are. They've been with us since we first organized. Two of our best men. They're giving the engine its last complete inspection. Tomorrow it goes through the test flight."

"Say, Marmon," asked Buzz, "what do you think of this new engine?"

"Why, it's absolutely perfect. No other outfit in the business has anything like it."

"Yes, sir. This engine will make other ships look like they're standing still," broke in Veto.

"How about going out and watching the Earth-Venus Express take off? You'll enjoy it," suggested Miller.

"O.K. I'll be seeing you fellows. Take good care of that engine."

The reporter followed Miller as he stepped onto a moving belt, and they soon were out on the field. The huge launching tubes pointed out along the edge of the field. On the number five tube, people waited for the gangway to be lowered. The sun glistened on the silver half of the Stellite steel hull. White-clad mechanics were busily refueling and servicing the plane. The gigantic projectile resembled a cigar with a grid of holes at one end. The mechanics now were signing various papers and reports.

Caruso was handed a pair of glasses that looked like a pair of milk cans attached to an eyeglass frame.

"Say, these are big enough! I hope I can see something of the takeoff through them," complained Caruso.

"You'll see everything as plain as day. They only filter out the harmful rays from the jets."

At this point a loud siren blasted over the P.A. system, and a harsh, metallic voice, which sounded to Caruso very like that of John Spanos, announced, "Earth-Venus Express leaving Port Five in forty-five seconds. All those on field don filter glasses."

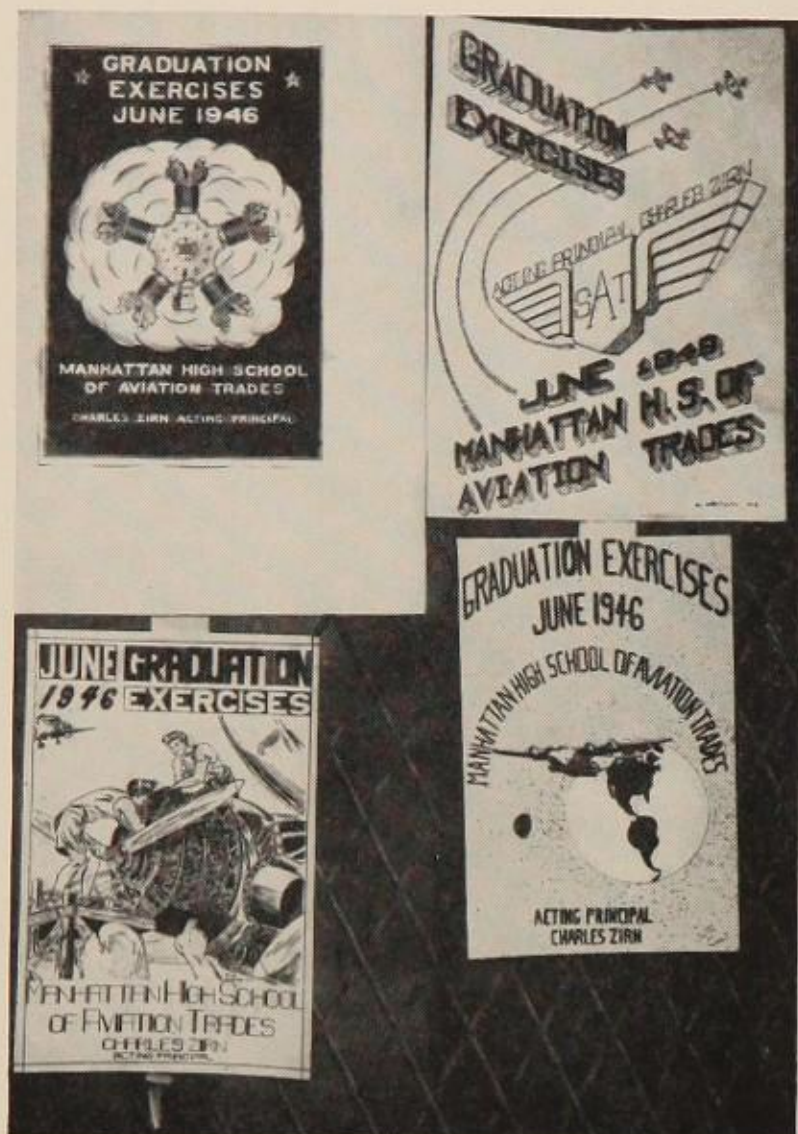

People scurried into the operations building. A jarring bell crashed over the loud speakers. It was the ten-second warning bell. And, right on time, as Caruso watched intently, the whole rear of the plane seemed to burst into flames. Then out of each jet came a blowtorch effect like a stream of white-hot gases. There was a tremendous roaring which seemed to grow in intensity. The clamps retreated, and the great ship tore out of the tube. For a split second it turned every color of the rainbow, and then vanished from sight.

"What a dream. Boy, that's exciting," shouted Caruso.

The two old friends walked back through the great building, and as they parted at the door, Caruso said, "You know, Miller, I always thought something great would come out of S.A.T., but this organization really is beyond anything I had hoped for."

"You can say that again," was the answer.

WALTER GARDNER

graduation poster contest

One of S. A. T.'s finest traditions is that each term some senior shall have his handiwork pictured on the title page of the graduation program. Mr. Noska always evinced great interest in the proceedings of each contest, and spent many hours helping to judge the entries. This term, the jury consisted of Mr. Zirn, Mr. Diamond, Mr. Naidich, Mr. Quinn, Mr. Fidell, and Mr. Schwartz. Mr. Schwartz, under whose direction more than sixty seniors this term were inspired to put forth their best efforts, has nothing but praise for the lads who helped make the current contest one of our most hotly contested. When the student masterpieces finally reached the judging stage, after much discussion and painstaking voicing of judgment, the following edicts were handed down: First Prize, $10. to Walter Gardner; Second Prize, $5. to Rene Perez; Third Prize, $3. to Alvin Krutulow; Fourth Prize, $2. to George Gaguras; Fifth Prize, $1. to Robert Mancin. Right behind the five who finished in the money were the following boys, judged worthy of honorable mention: Austin Clarke, George Gaguras (two entries), William Hannan, Gene Jiminez, William Lapping, Robert Ludemann, John Mindedal, Edsel Rodriguez, David Schneider, Andy Wakuluk. A replica of the design executed by Walter Gardner, altered for the purpose, appears as the title page of SOLO.

As a member of S.A.T.'s second peacetime graduating class, I am proud of the fact that I shall soon take my place in the ever-progressing industry of aviation. The skills and knowledge that we have procured through hard, honest work will form the cornerstone upon which our building of success will stand. Though the road ahead is difficult, we must endeavor to reach our goal. Only through patience and perseverance, and in honest and fair dealings with our fellow men will we meet with success and happiness. Yes, the future looks bright. The clear blue sky and the airplane on the wing beckon. Now I go out into the trade of my choice, I see my life's dream coming true. In aviation lie my ambitions, my happiness, my life's work.—Joseph Giordano.

My plan is to get connected with some airline and fly commercially. I have had a few hours in the air, and these hours infected me with the thrill and romance of flying. True, further schooling is necessary before I can meet the requirements for commercial piloting, but I am ready to take that in stride, for the rewards are worth the effort. My S.A.T. background has given me knowledge of engines, radio, and many other skills. With my S.A.T. training as a base, I feel certain I can go ahead to achieve my goal.—Ted Margolin.

As an S.A.T. graduate, I want to give my very all to this rapidly developing aviation field, but I don't want to stop at being a mechanic. This Fall I plan to enter L.I.U. for a year, and after building up a decent average, go to one of the finer engineering institutes. Engineering will give me a chance to express my own ideas on modern aircraft. After college I hope to get a job at one of the aircraft plants in California, because California is the hub of the industry, and perfect so far as I am concerned.—Leonard Harrison.

When graduation is over and I am free to go my way, I will travel about the country looking for a piece of land of two hundred acres. Then I will find some way to get it, probably by working until I have enough saved for a down payment. On this land I'll build a house, barn, and after some time a hangar. My ambition is to expand my property into a small airport. At the same time, I hope to continue studying aviation until I know enough to pass my A. and E. tests. With them behind me, my future will be assured.—Chester Augustowski.

Two months ago, I passed the V-5 test, which will enable me to qualify for training as a pilot in the Naval Air Corps. Enlistment in the Navy for four years, I think, is quite as good as going to college. Furthermore, the practical experience I know I'll get in the Navy will be most valuable, when my hitch is done and I'm ready for civilian life. Then I'll look around for work with some commercial airport.—Henry Feldman.

I have been planning on college for years. For the last two years, I have attended night school and have taken subjects required for college entrance. I expect to complete a four-year aeronautical engineering course, then pursue my ambition to get into aeronautical designing. I've been designing airplanes since I was twelve. I have also made some inventions and installed them on my models. It may have taken me hours, days, weeks to figure out one item, but as long as I made it I was satisfied. I will continue this as my hobby, and perhaps it will be helpful in my work in later years.—Henry Iken.

The five years following either graduation or service with the armed forces will undoubtedly shape the future of my entire life. My plans for a vocation are to become an airplane mechanic and work my way up to a job as either a draftsman, designer, or engineer. This may sound as if I am planning to do it the "hard way," but I believe the practical knowledge and experience which I will gain during the time I am an airplane mechanic will aid me greatly in any of the jobs I receive later. Although these plans are just my visions of today, I am determined to work hard to make them the realities of tomorrow.—Darwin Lanyi.

After leaving S.A.T. I intend going to Curtis Wright Technical Institute in Glendale, California. When I have completed my aeronautical engineering course, I plan to get a job as a research engineer for an airplane manufacturing company. I should like to work for a company like Pan-American Airways at the Miami Airport, and settle down permanently there. If I am drafted, I'll try getting into the Air Corps. At any rate, I am determined to make aviation my career.—Robert Rosenblatt.

As soon as I can, I hope to enter college. Here I will learn more about my chosen field, aviation. Also, I will major in business and management. Upon completing college, I will try to get a job with some airline. While working there, I will be introduced to a multitude of practical aviation problems. Meanwhile, as much as I can afford will go into the bank. This will help me achieve my final ambition—to own my own airport and service station. Everything that I have learned will become an integral part of this airport. It will be of benefit to my customers, for it will help make their planes safer, and insure their stepping out of each plane in one piece. So you see it really wasn't all over when I received my diploma. In fact, it just started.—Murray Stone.

Now that I have the basic fundamentals of aviation, I look forward to a term in the U. S. Navy to further my mechanical inclinations. Then, to reach a point where I can feel secure in my aviation knowledge, I plan to enter the new Wilbur Wright School. When all this is over, I intend to form a partnership with two friends and try my luck in Alaska, where I believe a boom in aviation is due. We will start with two small planes, and specialize in shipping special equipment from the states.—Irving Shmukler.

To climb as high as possible on the ladder of success has always been my ambition in life. With this thought in mind, I chose aeronautical engineering as my profession. In the process of achieving this goal, both evening school and summer school had to be attended for two terms each. Upon graduating from S.A.T., my studies will lead me to Brooklyn Polytech, where I plan to pursue a course leading to a master's degree in aeronautical engineering. Following college, my aim is to work for the government in the research laboratories at Langley Field or Wright Field, or with a large corporation such as Lockheed or Douglas.—Ronald Lucke.

I plan to study engineering at college. I think that my training at S.A.T. will help me to become a successful engineer. An engineer should know the fundamentals of shopwork. A mechanic looks up to an engineer as a superior. If the engineer doesn't know how to rivet, weld, splice, file, the mechanic loses respect for him. In college, the emphasis is placed on the designing and testing of work rather than on shopwork. After graduation from college, I hope to work for a large aircraft company. My real life's dream is to found a school for aeronautical engineering. No school in America offers a course in this field of engineering that keeps abreast of the latest developments.—Julius Golubow.

My future is one bridge that I'll not cross "when I come to it." I have been continually making plans for my first few years in industry, and they have altered only slightly. First, I should like to enlist in the Army as a ground crewman in the Air Corps. During this period I will gain invaluable knowledge, skill, and experience so necessary in the aviation industry. After my discharge, I will utilize my first few months as a civilian taking what I would dub an "insurance course." A civilian school will set me upon the right path to follow, and help me in acquiring my A. and E. licenses. And then—infinity. Just try and stop me.—Al Caruso.

baseball

The question this season was one of repetition for last year we produced a championship Baseball team. Under the great coaching of Mr. Chafetz and Mr. Perron last year, S.A.T. finished the season with a grand record of fifteen wins as against four losses. In the Bronx, Manhattan, Staten Island League, we finished with four victories, no losses. Outside the league, Mr. Chafetz's lads established a record of eleven wins, four losses. The lost games were filched by Columbus, Washington, Monroe and Brooklyn Automotive. Really stepping in fast company, our batmen beat such teams as Commerce, Lafayette, Haaren, Bryant, Rhodes, Stuyvesant and Chelsea. Finally, in the big game for the city championship, Vocational Division, we met Brooklyn Automotive, and in a thrilling game had to be content with second place. This year the boys are up in arms, though, and they fully intend to get every first place in the business. Sparking the team are such senior stars as Esposito and Hertz. Right behind them are Sperto and DeLecce, catchers; Ford, Valentinetti, Piacenti, pitchers; and fielders Pero, Lopez, Furman, Selm and Russo. With such a star-studded list, the team is bound to go places. Much of its success is due to the fact that its coaches, Mr. Chafetz and Mr. Perron, have given so much of their time to getting the boys on the field and ready for action. Increasing turnouts at succeeding games prove that the student body is behind this splendid group.

track

Let's face it, boys. The Track team isn't what it used to be. We've spent some time recently in poring over old issues of the Log and Solo, and we were amazed to find that in years gone by, the tracksters of S.A.T. used to come out in droves and vie with one another for the privilege of wearing the colors of our school. With the war, and the decision of the powers that be that athletics had to be deemphasized, the Track team fell upon evil days, and regretfully we must announce that there seems to be no upsurge in popular sentiment taking place. Mr. Shale and Mr. Bader took over Mr. Fellner's duties this February, and spent loads of time and energy attempting to rebuild a once-powerful aggregation. Many tryout sessions were called, but the number of students turning out was dishearteningly small. For the first time in school history, there isn't a single senior on the team. The squad is now composed of twenty members, a tiny roster for any high school outfit. Faithful, spirited diehards are Captain Hirshkowitz, Russell, Ross, and Owen. The big boy of the team is Pasqualini, shotput artist. But these fellows and the others who make up the team can't hope for good results unless their ranks are swelled by many others. Here is your chance to get acquainted with a swell bunch of "right guys" and store up health that will last for the rest of your life. Get running and keep going. Attend tryouts. You may have the makings of an Olympic champion. Stranger things have happened.

basketball

S.A.T. students had reason for rejoicing this year, for basketball was back, and back to stay. After a year's absence from the scene of sports, Mr. Bentley again took the coaching burden on his shoulders by reinstituting basketball at S.A.T. At the beginning of the September '45 term, Coach Bentley issued a call for tryouts and was elated when a large number of ambitious students turned out for the team. From this talent, there emerged a squad of willing, hardy players. After months of hard, grueling coaching and practicing, Mr. Bentley produced a smooth-working combination. At the outset of the season, the team established an extremely favorable record. The first game of the season was a thriller, with Murray Hill coming out on the short end of a close score. Of its first seven games, S.A.T. copped five. Later, Mr. Bentley's charges trounced McKee, N. Y. Printing, Central Needle Trades, and Bronx Vocational, losing only to Gompers and Metropolitan by close scores. In January, three seniors, Huck Sloat, Bill Garrett, and Bill Bart, left and with them went our championship dreams. Although the team fought hard, it managed to salvage only a few games from the inevitable wreckage. Outstanding senior members were Captain Danny Goldsmith, Tony Giovinni, Marve Gershel, Bob Aitken, and the team's high scorer, Henry Schwartz. Mr. Bentley is set on producing a championship team next year, and we wish him and the boys a great deal of luck and success in their attempt to get back to the good old days when S.A.T. teams ruled the roost.

handball

Handball has always been one sport in which S.A.T. has been able to hold its own with practically any aggregation in the city of New York, vocational and academic alike. Like many other teams, however, it has suffered from an undue turnover in coaches. Last year, Mr. Buckley had his group tuned up and ready for action. Composed of hard-hitting neighborhood champs, the outfit was willing to match skill with any team that showed up. Alas! Very few teams did show up—so few, indeed, that most games were won by default. In the final match of the season, though, Alexander Hamilton did appear, and the boys heaved a sigh of relief and proceeded to win handily. Not a single match was lost all season. With Mr. Buckley's transfer, Mr. Pincus, genial teacher of English and ex-GI, offered his valuable services as mentor. Tryout sessions were called and a team of twelve experienced wall men selected to defend our colors. At this writing, no games have been played, but the schedule is a tough one, with such ancient rivals as Chelsea, Murray Hill, Bronx Vocational and Brooklyn Automotive on the list. Such faculty enthusiasts as Mr. Borowsky and Mr. Wolozin tried to sneak themselves in, but student talent sent the chastened instructors back to the salt mines. As far as Mr. Pincus is concerned, the season is a great success already, for he can now last through eleven points with little trouble.

One of S.A.T.'s chief prize packages has always been its very successful monthly publication, the Log. Guided by faculty advisors who have never allowed the quality of the paper to deteriorate, these boys spend endless hours in research, interviewing, writing and rewriting their columns, editorials, and news stories. So efficient and painstaking have Log groups always been that the paper has won top honors in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association for the past few years. Biggest jobs, of course, requiring extensive preparation and planning, are Orientation, Senior Prom, and Graduation Night.

With Mr. Fidell's resignation as faculty advisor, the managing reins fell into the hands of Mr. Reilly. His aims are to keep the Log as bright and worthwhile as ever it was, and congratulations are due him for the first few issues this past term. Outstanding favorites are Dave Triebitz's "Hanging Out the Wash" and Ronnie Lucke's "Plane Talk." Dave's gossipy chatter is the result of his acquaintance with practically everybody around, while Ronnie's up to the minute information is possible only through wide reading in all aviation publications. Other outstanding members of the staff include Roy Diehl, responsible for "Green and Tan;" Lee Friedman, editor of "Alumni Notes"; and artist Dave Kovensky. Milan Valuch, managing editor, leaves this term, and expresses the hope of all graduating Log men that the Log may carry on and always receive the support it deserves.

bugle and drum corps

On the school agenda since 1934, no praise too great can ever be lavished on Mr. Bloom's magnificent Bugle and Drum Corps. Its long string of triumphs is evidenced by an impressive display of well over fifty trophies and medals, which can be seen by admiring students and visitors at vantage points in the Baron de Hirsch Annex. Many of these victories were realized at Army Day, Navy Day, and Memorial Day parades against the toughest of tough competition. Mr. Bloom's work is never done, for his group, never content to rest on laurels well-deserved, seeks out competition in neighboring states as well. This term's veteran members include Roger McGoldrick, color guard officer; Charles Doyle, drum major; and Daniel Rindner, the thumping bass drummer. Remarkable is the fact that no less than nine third-termers appeared with the Corps during this term's performances. Of its thirty-five members, seven represent the color guard, the others being the playing members. The Corps is standard entertainment at such functions as graduation and Orientation Night, and is always greeted with a thunderous round of applause. Members of the group are so enthusiastic about their activities that they hope in the near future to organize an alumni Bugle and Drum combination. Now that the war is over, we hope to see them again at our next Field Day, for time was when no Field Day was complete without the stirring spectacle they never failed to provide. Keep booming, boys. We're all for you.

music

The sweet strains of music once again resound through the mazes of the Baron de Hirsch Annex, for Mr. Rodgers is with us, and Mr. Rodgers is strictly from music, always. This hard-working, intensely enthusiastic teacher arrived and in but a few weeks had organized a vocal group of some hundred voices, all of them out of this world. Even lunch periods are foregone when music calls, these days. When the "Plane Talking" project struck, the vocal group gave out in melody still talked of down in the inner yard. The boys have also to their credit furthering swifter recovery on the part of patients at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, with highly-appreciated Easter and Christmas visits.

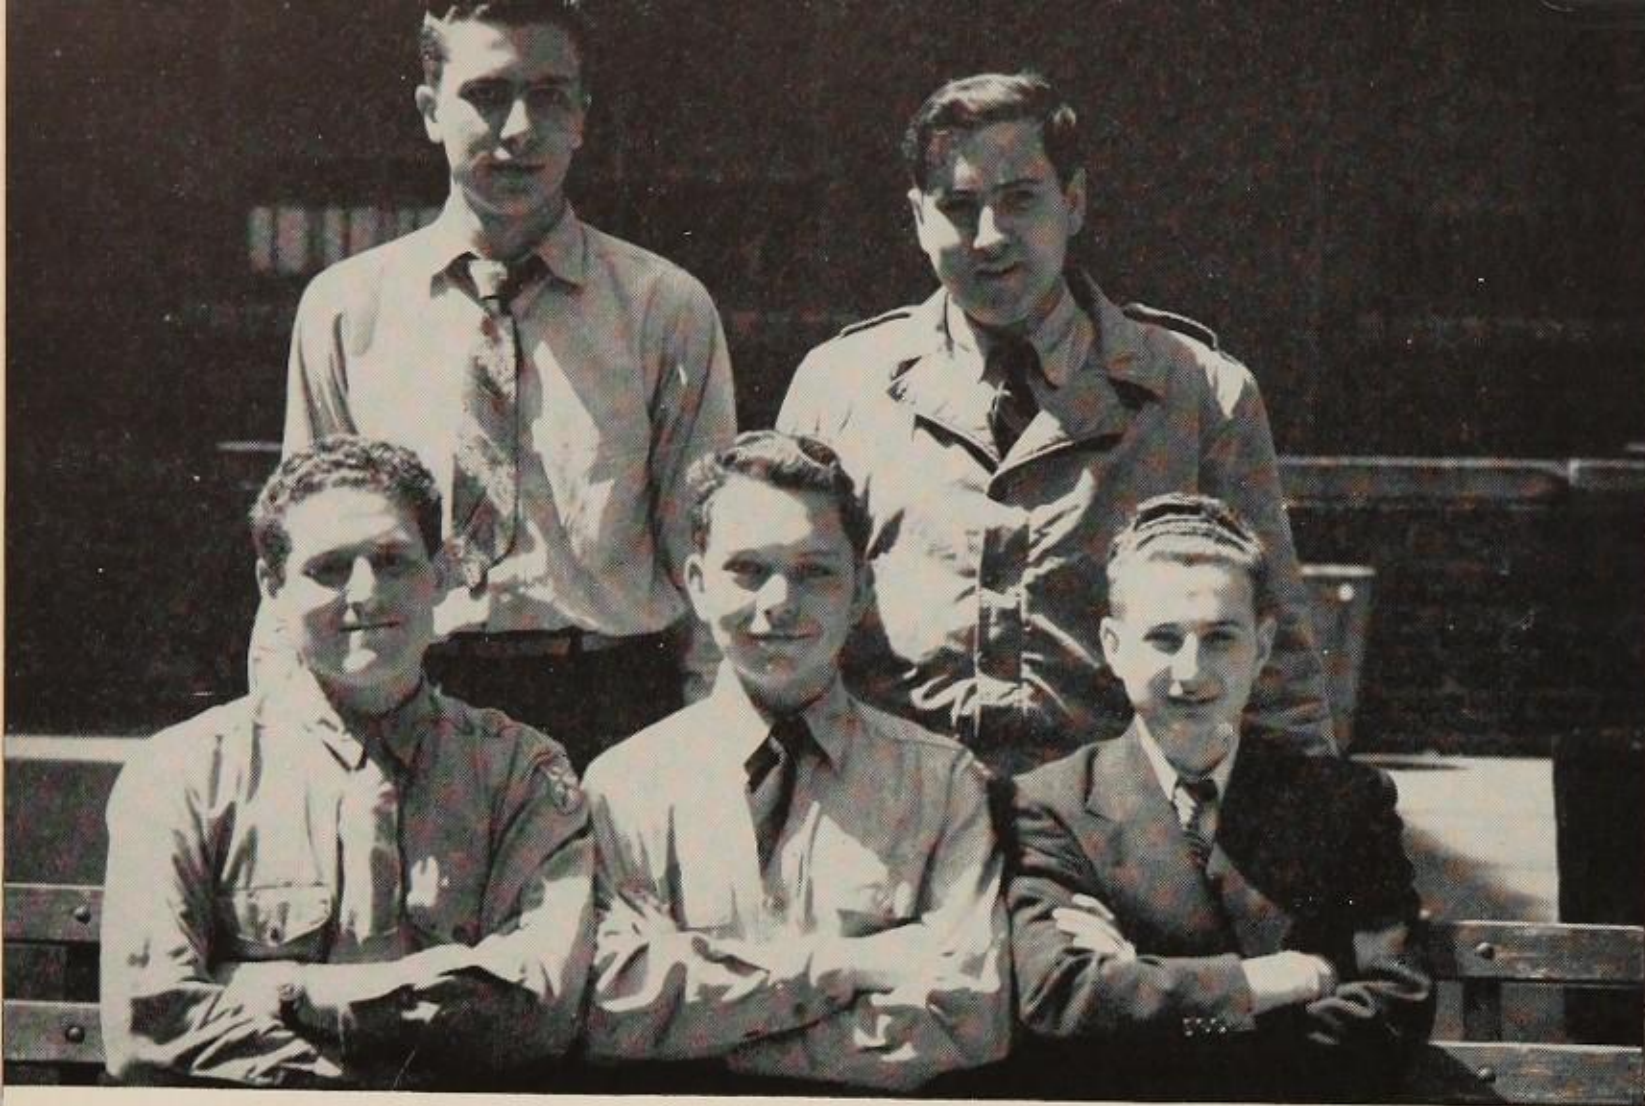

Not content with mere voices, Mr. Rodgers conducted a school-wide census of musical talent. A tremendous response brought forth the hidden talents of twelve pianists, fifteen clarinetists, fifteen saxophonists, four trombonists, five violinists, and twenty-four trumpet blowers. Mathematically inclined, Mr. Rodgers figures he can form at least one capable orchestra from this group. His promises are always good, and he promises that next term will see the commencement of an orchestra fit to uphold fair S.A.T. tradition. Perhaps, too, the near future will see a worthy successor to "Plane Talking," that show that proved S.A.T. isn't as far from Broadway as some people think. Great going, Mr. Rodgers, and don't you dare go away.

a. c. o.

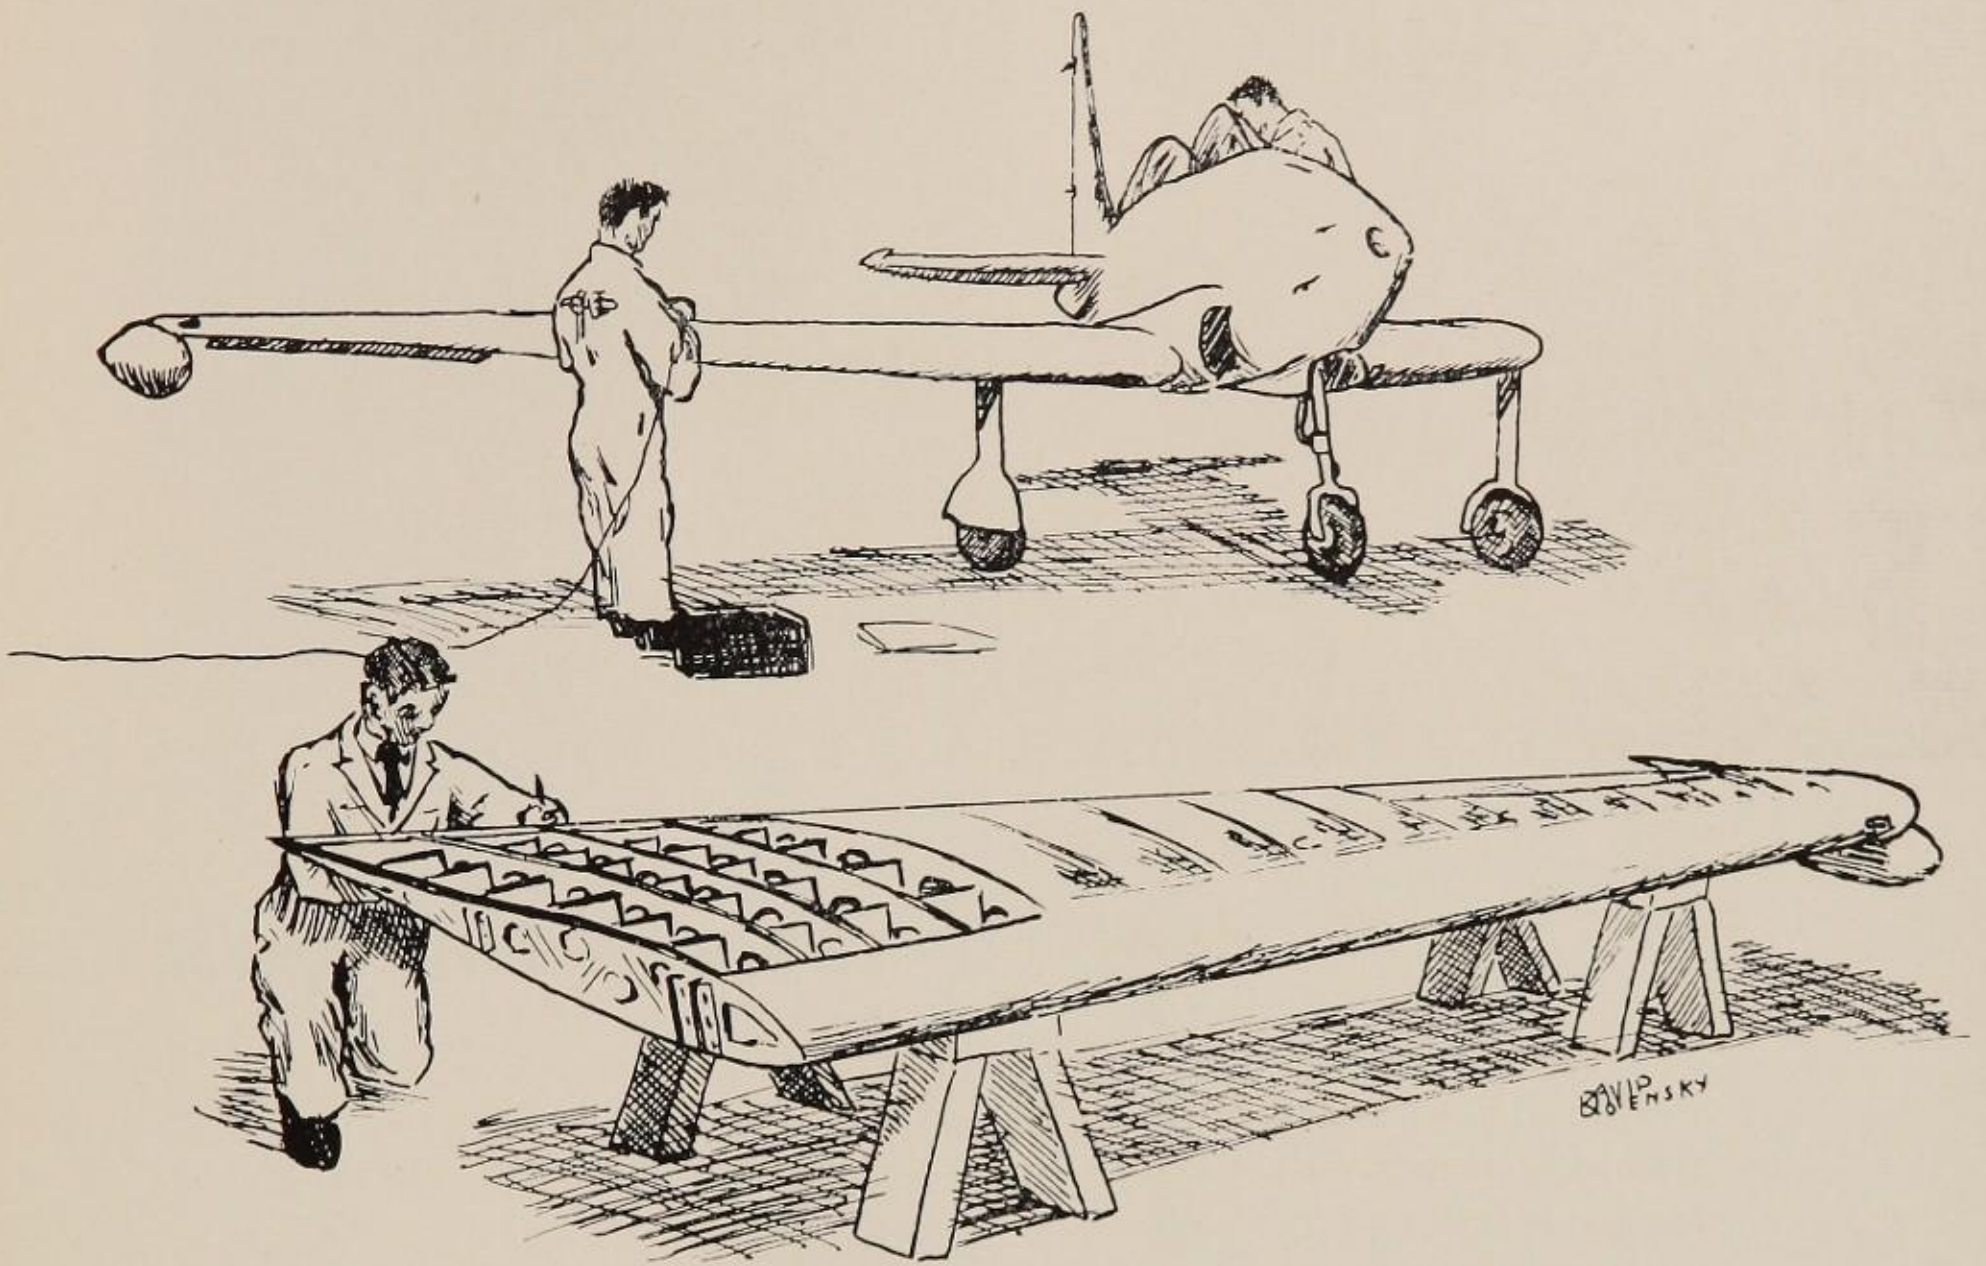

The A.C.O. is the students' own venture into the realm of self-government. The duly-elected president and the secretary of every official class are designated representatives to term meetings of the A.C.O. Their deliberations result in the election of a president and a secretary to the Executive Committee of the A.C.O. Represented is every term from third to eighth. Upon the shoulders of these twelve delegates rest the problems of student affairs at S.A.T. Now in peace, as in war, these young men act as the liaison between the faculty and the student body. They are the sparkplugs of all S.A.T.'s activities throughout our entire school life. The trusty center of this legislative group is their faculty advisor, Mr. Levine, whose wealth of experience and understanding of student problems is constantly in demand. Meetings this past term were managed very capably by the executive officers: Ralph Mitchell, president; John Temperino, vice-president; and Mario Marino, secretary.

All hands concerned agree that our school's interests are best served when as large a degree of self-government as possible is permitted the student body. The war has taught us the sticking power of democratic action. When more boys take an active interest in school affairs, and show their eagerness to work on school problems, even finer will be the fine school spirit that has always been present at S.A.T.

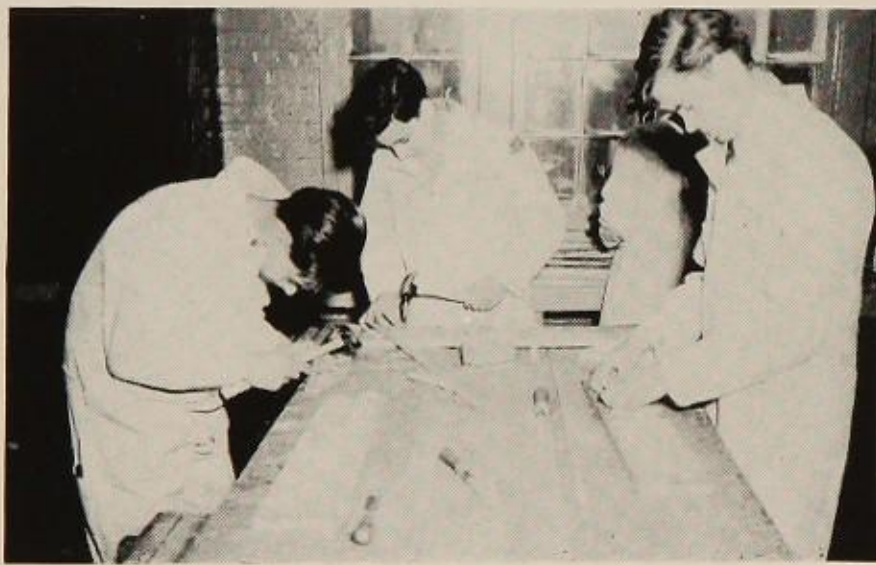

camera club

Camera bugs are so much a part of our civilization, that no school worth its salt should be without the lads who are most happy when they're stumbling over their solutions down in a room so dark that even Gremlins are afraid to enter. In their basement workshop, S.A.T.'s own cameralites work, work, work under the experienced supervision of Mr. Weinberg, no mean clicker himself. Marvin Mann, president, and Paul Singer, vice-president, both of whom have been with the club since third term, are both well on the way to what they hope will be success in commercial photography. Other members include Nathan Haspel and Teddy Juzwak. Working many hours on their own time before and after school, these lads contribute endless necessary material to the Log and the Solo. Years of patience brought Mr. Weinberg his coveted Speed Graphic, added tenderly to printer, enlarger, dryer and other special chemical accessories. Mr. Weinberg does not merely supervise the activities of experts who know what it's all about. He is constantly instructing boys in the technicalities of photographic techniques and processes. That his instruction bears fruit is proved by the boys who have left S.A.T. and turned to high altitude camera work with the armed forces. We have seen plans for the new S.A.T., and are happy to pass on the good news that it will be equipped with a dark room good enough for all school purposes.

wings for you

SHOP THREE: The accuracy of all shopwork done by the student in the course of his vocational training is dependent upon the third term shops. It is within these rooms that the rookie is given training in woodwork. "But, all the planes today are made of metal," argue some. This is not true! The majority of small civilian aircraft in operation is of composite construction, metal and wood combined. It is important that the future mechanic be acquainted with the techniques of constructing wooden components. Under the watchful eyes of the third-term instructors, the new student makes the wooden parts of an actual wing section, two-thirds size. This training is the foundation of all future aviation training.

SHOP FOUR: Our rookie is now an "educated rookie," with a record of successful shop work behind him. Fourth term shop work consists of metal work, advanced woodwork, and fabric covering. Metal fittings needed for the wing section started in third term are completed by the end of the first third. Then the student assembles his handiwork. "Doesn't fit? Push it a little, maybe it'll go on." The second third is spent fitting ribs, spars, and fairing pieces. Fabric is then sewed on to specifications set down by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. It is then doped to a bright hue with contrasting colors for lettering.

SHOP FIVE: From fourth term into fifth, the student hopes for temporary relief from the rigors of hand filing and hacksawing, but his hopes are short-lived. Upon stepping into the fifth term shop, he is granted possession of the noble file. Thereupon said file is as important to the student as his own good right arm. Advanced metal work in the form of complex fittings and the aileron both contribute to the near perfection of student workmanship. Under the expert guidance of their instructors, these mechanics-to-be see their goal coming ever nearer.

techniques and tanks

SHOP SIX: His days of "zombieism" behind him, the sixth-termer enters gaily upon the second half of his shop career at S.A.T. The importance of sheet-metal work is brought to every student's attention in this term. The new sixth term course of study provides for ten full weeks of bulkhead work, which is utilizing advanced layout work. Then come five weeks of gas tanks, with those tests that every student dreads, lest they show careless construction techniques. Finally, the S.A.T. lad gets his first taste of machine shop, a universal favorite.

engine heaven

SHOP SEVEN: The ex-sixth termers are suddenly surrounded by a maze of machinery. Confused, he sits down to his first shop talk. After a short lesson by one of his competent instructors the haze begins to rise and fade away. Soon familiar with the many new tools he encounters, the student learns to apply textbook knowledge to the disassembling of the power plant. Working against time, and at first overwhelmed by elaborate equipment, he absorbs the basic information and practice necessary to acquaint him with the heart of the airplane. It is the training in this field that shapes the future of the engine mechanic, and upon which depends his success.

SHOP EIGHT: Head high, uniform new and bright, and coveralls battle-fatigued, the senior steps into the eighth-term shop. From the structure shop conducted by Mr. Miller and Mr. Baker, he moves on to engine installation. Prodded gently by Mr. Wirth and Mr. Frontario, the eighth-term grasps the rudiments of installation, then proceeds to the advanced sheet-metal shop of Mr. Varjan and Mr. Nejez. Time passes all too quickly, and the senior is ready for the supreme test, cable splicing. Amid ventilated fingers and the ready smiles of Mr. Barg and Mr. Robertson, the senior waits breathlessly for graduation. Suddenly, all is over, and the subdued graduate bids adieu to six terms of marvelous shops.

"Printed by the Comet Press, Inc."

has been a familiar, reassuring legend on the back page of school yearbooks and magazines for twenty-five years.

Into that small line of type has been packed the enthusiasm, vigor, and know-how of people steeped in the virtues of yearbooks and magazines.

Those staff members are trained to see that each publication has its own stamp of individuality. They are trained to consider your book by and for itself with an eye to planning layout, scheduling, and budget according to YOUR desires, tempo, and purse.

"Printed by The Comet Press, Inc." is and has been the hallmark of worth and integrity. We are proud to include it in SOLO.
